NHPC and UNICEF explore new synergies for children's well-being

Une visite de travail axée sur la recherche de partenariats

As part of its social commitments, the Nachtigal Hydro Power Company (NHPC) welcomed the Representative of UNICEF Cameroon and her team to the Nachtigal Hydroelectric Development site for a working visit dedicated to exploring partnership opportunities to improve children's well-being.

Discussions helped identify potential areas of collaboration within the framework of the "Child-Friendly Communities" programme an initiative by UNICEF that promotes children's protection, participation, and overall development within local communities.

The meeting also provided an opportunity to present NHPC's ongoing efforts to promote access to quality education, better health care, and socio-economic development in the communities surrounding the Nachtigal project.

Shared priorities for sustainable development

Around the table, discussions highlighted the strong alignment between NHPC's social priorities and UNICEF's areas of intervention particularly the shared commitment to placing children and young people at the heart of local development.

The visit concluded with a presentation of the Nachtigal hydroelectric installations led by Claire GALL, NHPC's General Manager, who reaffirmed the company's commitment to sustainable and inclusive development.

This meeting paves the way for a collaboration aimed at making access to energy a tangible driver for improving living conditions in the Nachtigal project area especially for children.
